Equipping Care Facilities with Video Phones for Care Residents

(May 5, 2011 News Release Excerpt)

Assistive Care Networking has announced its mission to equip assisted care facilities with video phones so their care residents can enjoy 'visually visiting' family and friends without needing to go out of the facility.

"Assisted care residents can not easily travel to see family and friends," affirms Assistive Care Networking founder, C. Alan Lewis.

"Now, without traveling, they can see them face to face," Lewis informs, "while visiting via video phones throughout the U.S. and over 60 other countries — with unlimited free calling!"

"To help our mission succeed; we joined the National Care Planning Council ("NCPC") as an Assistive Technology member; "explains Lewis, "sponsoring assisted care providers in becoming networking 'income opportunity' members distributing our brochure."
